What seems to be the problem officer?

You've been driving in the carpool lane for the past three miles, alone.

Alone? Well you should know that my pronouns are they, them so we can drive in the carpool lane.

I got a driver out here in the carpool lane who says her pronouns are they ...

Excuse me? Her?

All right, let's just get your license and registration please ma'am, ma'am, you, you can I say you?

You want me to provide photo ID? Racist much.

Okay, how about just a vaccine card then?

Um, yeah, no problem I've got all my medical records right here.

We were boosted seven times one for each of us, anyway it's all there? Are we free to go sir?

Wait, I'm sorry, did you just, uh, did you just assume my gender?

It's actually offensive to look at somebody and assume by their appearance that they are a man or a woman?

Man or woman? Now you're implicitly perpetuating the oppressive societal construct of the gender binary onto me, a victim of violent police aggression.

Please stop yelling. Verbal attacks are violence which is triggering.

Trigger? are you gonna shoot me? I, I literally can't even, I, ...

Don't you mean we? Yeah, we literally can't even ...

Saying you can't do something is ableist and mocks people that actually have a mental or physical disability.

We have a mental disability.

Well, I'm 1/1024 Navajo and you're lucky that I'm giving you a fine and not kicking you off my ancestor's land that you white colonizers stole from my people.

You can't fine we, that money funds police departments and perpetuates the terrorization of underprivileged communities in the expansion of the police state.

I need backup at the 405 in Santa Monica, they're getting away.

What? They? How many of them are there? Who's getting away?

They are. They are.

ah, I can't make it, gotta he, him holding up a deezer at a Pizza Hut Taco Bell.

Oh, cool, can you pick me up a pan pizza? You got it bud.
